Of all the changes that have occurred in the world during the past ten years, perhaps the most far-reaching is nothing but that domestically crafted cars have gained great popularity in China. Two primary reasons, I firmly believe, are responsible for this phenomenon. Firstly, with the introduction of state-of-the-art technical know-how and sophisticated management staff, the general quality of domestic cars has improved in leaps and bounds, which equals the preference of potential car consumers for the home-growth car over its rival brands. Secondly, it is worth noting that the friendly price of domestic car brands strongly appeal to families who are less well-off. Indeed, these families comprised the lion's share of the new Chinese car-brand customers, according to the survey conducted by China Daily.

All the evidence justifies an unmistakable conclusion that the thriving of domestically developed cars are bound to continue in the forthcoming future. However, it is worth mentioning that it is not advisable for Chinese car industry to settle for what they have achieved.
